

Quality Training Starts with Real Buildings

The North King County Training Consortium is fortunate to have two training towers in our area, but nothing beats the ability to train in buildings within our borders. This benefits our firefighters in a few ways:

- Learn in a “real life” environment
- Gets the firefighters familiar with buildings that are in our response areas
- Allows firefighters to interact and work with our communities

If you have a building that is set for demolition or vacant, we would love the opportunity to use it for training. In a limited capacity, we can benefit from the use of buildings that are occupied. For more information or if you can help us, please contact our team at info@nkctc.org.
